

Written by David Pena

Tuesday, 01 July 2008 00:00 - Last Updated Tuesday, 01 July 2008 03:56

A veritech fighter with high heels?

It is no surprise to see promising RLAM veritech sketches all over the internet, this one however looks quite good. Lobizon from the RobotechX forums discovered this little gem. Looks like an F-22 and its transformed mecha. Aside from the "high heels" as MEMO1DOMINION pointed out, the model looks interestingly good!

I'm sure as long as Warner Brothers and the new design teams do not butcher the original concept, people will come to realize that there HAS to be some compromise to appeal to general audience.

If we can expect something like Mr. High Heels over here in the image, then I am willing to accept and compromise, even if its not my beloved F-14 Tomcat.

Written by David Pena

Tuesday, 01 July 2008 00:00 - Last Updated Tuesday, 01 July 2008 03:56

For now looking at superficialities will have to suffice. There is much much much more to the production than pretty graphics and by this of course I mean STORY. Not much help is needed here aside from a couple tweaks here and there. The Robotech story is as solid as a rock withstanding the tests of time.

All it is now is a waiting game. Slowly but surely we will see if its a disaster or a complete success.